Annex A

Implementing Guidelines on the Allocation, Utilization, Documentation and Reporting of Downloaded Funds to Regions and Divisions for the Development or Enhancement of Contingency Plans

I. INTRODUCTION

The Philippines is exposed to both natural and human-induced hazards. These include hydrometeorological hazards such as tropical cyclones which bring flooding and landslides as secondary hazards; and geological hazards such as earthquakes and volcanic eruptions.

In terms of human-induced hazards, the country is threatened by armed conflicts fueled by political and secessionist movements, violent extremism, culture and tradition-based conflicts.

The Philippines is also affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. This is an example of a biological hazard that has a complex and wide-reaching adverse effect on the delivery of education services. It also affects other educational resources and investments and puts at risk both the lives of the learners and the personnel of the Department of Education (DepEd).

II. IMPACTS ON SCHOOLS

Based on the Enhanced Basic Education Information System (EBEIS) of DepEd from school year 2009-2010 to school year 2017-2018, there were 43,810 schools nationwide that reported to have experienced natural hazards, and 21,949 schools have reported to have experienced human-induced hazards.

For this reason, DepEd conducts contingency planning annually to effectively prepare for, respond to and recover from disasters rapidly. This addresses the vulnerabilities of the education sector. It makes possible the continuity of education amid the pandemic, other disasters and emergencies arising from natural and human-induced hazards.
